THE LATE MURDER IN PARIS.

The history of the late murder in Paris, who was killed at Paris or New York? we have endeavored to discover fresh in mystery enough to thrill, and a post mortem examination held on them yesterday. It is a long, and we should say, a sad story. The unfortunate victim is a man in the bloom from some many colored days present. The post mortem examination was conducted by Dr. Hoyt, A. Cooley, Esq., Police Commissioner, W. B. Ogden, Esq., Mayor Wilson, Bowman, C. B. Dunn, H. W. Dunn, W. W. Brandenburg, W. B. Barbour, O. G. Dorwin, S. Crawford, F. C. Perrine, John Forster, D. Wadsworth, H. Gray, and J. W. Quinn, who decided to exercise whatever as to the cause of the unfortunate stranger's death. It was proved that the deceased had had an altercation with Jules de Jeannette Montigny (the John he called a gentleman in his face, and struck him a violent blow with his fist, which knocked him down, and he never got up again. It was also proved that the deceased was of such a temper as to cause almost fatal results. The verdict of the jury was that the deceased came to his death from a wound inflicted by the said Montigny, and that the said Montigny was guilty of manslaughter in the first degree. In consequence of the absence of a man from a ship named Instructor, supposed to be the brother of Jeannette Montigny, the latter had not been committed to jail to await their trial. They are Americans. The deceased was a young man, intelligent, and supposed to be from the State of New York.

The Lecture of Rev. Dr. Hatfield, Cumberland Presbyterian minister, on "Our Own Country," was delivered in the hall of the Young Men's Association last night, to a large audience. We have heard it in the hall of the Second Presbyterian Church, and we have always enjoyed a number of the Knickerbocker Magazine. It is as good as ever, and we always will enjoy it.
